The memorial to Christian minister Isaac Watts is among the 60,000 graves in Abney Park. Volunteers are needed to help uncover, map and research the remaining people buried there

VOLUNTEERS are being sought to help uncover, map and research the people buried at Abney Park cemetery.

In 2016, the Council received £21,400 from the Heritage Lottery Fund to run a project, called Abney Unearthed, over two years. Now in its final year, the team is seeking more volunteers to help map the remaining graves. One of London's 'magnificent seven' garden cemeteries, Abney Park opened in 1840. Over the next century, around 200,000 people were laid to rest, until nature took over and began obscuring the graves.

Project manager Haydn S says: "Abney Unearthed is so important because it is giving an identity to the people buried here." See pages 4-5.

SUGAR SMART
Hackney

1 IN 7 children are already obese when starting reception

A new campaign aims to cut excessive sugar consumption caused by fizzy drinks

It's time to ditch the fizz

Cans of 330ml non-diet fizzy drinks contain at least six or more teaspoons of sugar

A JOINT initiative between the Council and the Hackney Food Partnership, called Sugar Smart, has launched a 'Ditch the Fizz' campaign to encourage residents to give up unhealthy soft drinks.

Consuming too much sugar can lead to tooth decay, obesity and diabetes in adults and children.

In fact, one in seven children in the UK are already obese when starting reception, with one in four obese when they leave primary school.

Fizzy drinks are the largest single source of sugar in people's diets, providing 29 per cent of the daily sugar intake for children aged 11-18.

Non-diet fizzy drinks are very high in sugar with 79 per cent of 330ml cans containing at least six or more teaspoons of sugar. The maximum daily sugar limit for those aged 11 and above is seven teaspoons.

Cutting out fizzy drinks is therefore an easy way to reduce sugar intake, particularly for children who drink the most.

Schools already taking action in Hackney include Mandeville Primary, E5, and Holmleigh Primary, N16. All soft drinks have already been banned at The Urswick School, E9.

Everyone living and working in the borough will be encouraged to cut out soft drinks for two weeks as part of the Ditch the Fizz campaign that runs from 14 May to 17 June.

A HACKNEY-based gardening club is using a much loved flower as a symbol of political activism to help highlight diversity and shared pride.

Rainbow Grow, a Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer, Intersex, plus (LGBTQI+) group, launched a 'plant a pansy' campaign to draw attention to the difficulties still faced by LGBTQI+ people in Britain and across the world.

In 2005, artist Paul Harfleet created the Pansy Project as a way to deal with bad memories of homophobic abuse in a positive way.

Using guerrilla gardening, he planted pansies in the pavement cracks of places where homophobic abuse had taken place, reclaiming the space with an act of resistance, and using the flower as a powerful symbol of protest.

Inspired by this project, Rainbow Grow has developed its version for the RHS Hampton Court Palace Flower Show in July.

The group is working with community members to grow 3,000 pansy seeds, which will then be planted as part of a display entitled 'Prejudice to Pride'.

Rising from the bed of pansies will be a rainbow arc supporting decorated plant pots of edible plants,

Plant a pansy and contribute to a display at RHS Hampton Court Palace Flower Show ranging from red berries to purple kale.

Rainbow Grow member Kad Karababa, 32, said: "We will be planting loads of different colours and types of pansies to represent the diversity of our community."

"Rooted in this bed of flowers will be our rainbow planter arc, representing our shared pride, and showing how our strength is supported by each other."

In preparation for the show, the group has already held pansy planting sessions in London Fields, Chatsworth Road Market and Hackney Carers

We will be planting loads of different colours and types of pansies to represent the diversity of our community Centre. More workshops and events will take place across the borough until 29 May, including Multi-Culti-ation on 26 May at 184A Dalston Lane.

Rainbow Grow has also set up a crowd-funding site for the rainbow arc planter. The group hopes to raise £3,000 to fund this. There are prizes on offer for donations including foraging walks and even a rainbow food dinner.

Tune in to Black History Month

HACKNEY Museum is developing an exhibition as part of the borough's Black History Season launching in October. The display is set to focus on music, and museum staff would like to hear from residents about the impact and influence of African and Caribbean music in Hackney. They are looking for people to share their memories of where they went and what they listened to: be it gospel at church, or lovers rock in clubs such as the Four Aces in Dalston (inset); pirate radio stations to local record shops, on nights out or at house parties.

Hackney or Newcastle? Scavenger hunt maps NE street signs

IT was a ghost hunt, but not as you know it. On 21 April, residents scoured the streets of the former NE postal district, tracking down and mapping the last remaining street signs bearing what is now the postcode for Newcastle.

In 1865, the Post Office

divided London into 10 districts, two central (WC and EC) and eight radiating out from the centre, corresponding to the points of the compass (N, S, E, W, NE, SE, NW and SW).

It did not last long. The following year, the NE district folded into E. In 1869, the distinction between NE and E was more formally abolished and the public were instructed to address all letters using E.

Despite this, the Metropolitan Borough of Hackney continued to use

NE on street signs until 1917 and some NE signs remain today.

Event organiser Sam Roberts said: "This scavenger hunt came about via a Twitter conversation where a few of us were finding and mapping these surviving street signs.

"Our aim was to conduct a comprehensive survey of them."

The area was divided into sections, with different teams walking down each stretch of road, looking for and documenting the surviving signs that exist there.

They took photos of the signs, then shared them and their locations on Twitter using the hashtag #NESigns.

Unearthing Abney

Volunteers uncover, map and research the park's buried people

An ivy-entangled angel extends one broken arm in greeting, but volunteer Marina Szijarto walks on past her. She kneels to brush ferns from a slab of mossy stone that slumps at a drunken angle in the undergrowth.

"We've discovered a poetess and war writer called Alice R Cron," she says excitedly. "It's so interesting to discover graves which were covered up. Even if they weren't well known people, just putting a name to a number is a way of honouring them."

She pauses from her work for a moment. "Where else, in this day and age, can you still discover stuff?" she asks. "To be allowed to do this is amazing, I love it."

Marina is part of a group of volunteers who meet every Tuesday in Stoke Newington's historic Abney Park. One of London's 'magnificent seven' garden cemeteries, it opened in 1840 with a radical remit – a burial place for all, regardless of their religion.

Over the next century, around 200,000 people were laid to rest in 60,000 graves ranging from elaborate monuments to path-side common grave markers. General William and Catherine Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, were buried here, as was renowned Victorian lion tamer Frank Bostock.

By the time the cemetery was redesignated as a nature reserve in 1993, however, life had already begun to reassert itself over the dead. Hundreds of insect species made homes among the graves, including the moth Adela reaumurella and the endangered girdled mining bee.

Lush tendrils wound their way around tombstones, moss meandered across inscriptions and the names – and stories – of those buried beneath them were obscured.

Until, 2016 that is, when the Council received £21,400 from the Heritage Lottery Fund in order to run a new project. Led by volunteers for a period of two years, Abney Unearthed would uncover, map and research the lost inhabitants of the park, telling the story of how the park, and Hackney more widely, changed between 1880 and the 1970s.

Project manager Haydn S explains: "Abney Unearthed is so important because it is giving an identity to the people buried here. There are hundreds of people undiscovered, and it's almost like their life never existed."

In the past 15 months the volunteer team has uncovered, catalogued and mapped countless such local lives. "We found a commissioner to Stoke Newington Library whose grave stone was hidden below the soil," says Marina. "He even received a note from Charles Dickens in the archives. His grave would have been lost! It's definitely made it worthwhile digging the last couple of weeks."

Fellow volunteer, Alison Palmer, adds: "Some of the people who lived on the road I live on were buried here. I managed to find the man who built my own house, which was very exciting."

"It's so enjoyable finding out how people lived, how they died, where they died – some in foreign countries, some in battle, disease..." explains yet another volunteer, Bob Fraser, as he takes a break in the sunshine. "It's a challenge to find who they are, but it's fulfilling work."

With just one year left before the project draws to a close, the team is calling for volunteers to join it every Tuesday morning and help to discover the hundreds more whose identities and stories remain buried alongside them.

"When the Council first began managing the park in 2015, the idea was to make a big bid to the Heritage Lottery Fund, to make various improvements on site, like sorting out the chapel and other buildings," explains Abney Park manager Tom Simpson.

The Abney Unearthed project is, he explains, a forerunner to that big bid, and a vital one at that. "The project is important because if you want to make something better, you have to understand what you have," says Tom, adding: "this project is about understanding what is here, and how we are going to look after it in the future."

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

hackneypeople

By Harriet Worsley

THERE seems to be a real divide between the people you meet in these fancy co-working spaces and the rest of the people who live in Hackney, who may have great business ideas, but don't get the same support to make it real. And to be frank, that kind of sucks."

Christian Ahlert knows what he's talking about. Since arriving in the UK in 2003, he has been at the centre of East London's tech scene, helping to launch the world's first ever online courier company – the aptly named eCourier – and then creating MiniBar Labs, a network for the dizzying number of start-ups that spring up daily around Hackney's silicon roundabout.

The explosion in tech and creative companies has been a huge boon to the borough's economy in the past five years. Now, says Christian, "there are so many programmes for people in the tech community, teaching you how to pitch for funding, or polish your branding. People are throwing phrases like 'venture capital' around all the time."

But outside of this bubble, he suggests, things are very different. "People are living or working next door to each other, but barely meeting," he says. "There are many more people who would love to start a small business, but that level of support just isn't available to them."

Nor is that the only inequality that troubles him. Christian continues: "By 2040, 40 per cent of the UK's population is predicted to be over retirement age. Yet you walk around the tech start-ups or media agencies in Hackney and you see no one over the age of 50. How does that make sense?"

'Diversity is one of Hackney's greatest strengths'

Christian Ahlert is the co-founder of Un-Age, the start-up programme which aims to bring together young and older people to build a business

"We think that diversity across age and culture creates more interesting and more successful businesses"

And so he and his friend Gini Simpson decided to tackle both problems at once. Next month, the first Un-Age course will be rolled out for Hackney and East London residents who want to create their own businesses. But while there are a plethora of such start-up programmes on the market, this one is different.

First, it is free. Second, and perhaps more radical, Un-Age is exclusively for people aged under 25 and over 55, who are interested in teaming up to launch their dream business with someone at the very opposite end of their professional life.

"We think that diversity across age and culture creates more interesting and more successful businesses," says Christian, pointing out that diversity is one of Hackney's greatest strengths.

A first trial has already resulted in Brazlbo – a food pop-up created by Jason, a 19-year-old Brazilian, and Evelyn, 57, and from the Igbo tribe in Nigeria.

Together, says Christian, this unlikely pair are creating some amazing dishes, inspired by their mutually rich heritages. Their business model, too, draws strength from their very different life experiences.

In part because of Brazlbo's success, Un-Age's first course will also coach its participants in how to launch a food start-up.

"Food makes sense for start-ups," says Christian, "because it's so scaleable. You can start with an occasional pop-up, progress to a market-stall, then maybe even find a permanent site."

The first cohort will start work on 4 May. For two weeks they will be connected with mentors. In the evenings and over the course of a Saturday, they will learn about business development strategies, branding and marketing techniques.

Then, in what he calls 'a friendly Dragon's Den', they will pitch their idea in the hope of becoming one of the two winners who will get a business support package worth £1,000 – as well as connections with restaurants, markets and other venues at which they might launch their dream company.

To take part, residents need to fit into one of those age brackets, demonstrate real enthusiasm for starting a food business and, well... that's it. "We don't have any stringent criteria," says Christian, "it's needs-based, but we want to be as inclusive as possible. You could be a 55-year-old retired teacher, or an unemployed teen."

He continues: "Anyone can have that passion, whatever their age or background. I want to see them all given the opportunity to make their dream work."

Pupils at Jubilee Primary School teamed up with creative organisation Little Inventors to launch the Ocado Food Waste Challenge

Food waste challenge

PUPILS at Jubilee Primary School, N16, have discovered their inner Leonardo da Vincis, after being chosen to kick-start a national campaign to reverse the UK's culture of food waste.

New research from Ocado suggests that 7.3 million tonnes of food and drink are binned each year by British homes. Plus, the average family could save £700 a year by eating all the food they discard.

The online supermarket has teamed up with children's organisation Little Inventors to launch the Ocado Food Waste Challenge. It is designed to encourage Britain's young brains to come up with solutions to food waste, and interactive inventing workshops will be held at schools across the country.

The very first was held

“If we uncover something amazing, we'll be looking to turn it into a product” at Jubilee Primary on 20 March. British inventor and founder of Little Inventors, Dominic Wilcox, shared some of his own food waste inventions and encouraged pupils to design their own.

Suzanne Westlake, Head of Corporate Responsibility & Corporate Affairs at Ocado, said: “If we uncover something amazing, we'll be looking to turn it into a fully functioning product and list it on Ocado for our customers. Watch this space!”

Improvements to Wick Road

WORK has begun on making improvements to the Wick Road area, between Kenworthy Road and Morning Lane. Last year the Council consulted on the improvements, including reverting Wick Road to two-way traffic; adding better pedestrian crossings; creating separate cycle tracks in both directions; replacing trees and removing some car parking spaces.

The first phase is from the south side of Wick Road, between Bradstock Road and Kenton Road. Parking bays will be suspended when necessary on both sides of the road to allow safe working.

Side roads may also need to be closed and bus stops suspended when necessary during the work.

The improvements will take place from 8am-5pm, Monday-Saturday until May next year.

THE Council has decided not to send residents a garden waste collection calendar this year, in order to reduce waste and save money.

Instead, residents can check their collection days and download a printable calendar on the Council website at:

Get a £54 voucher to use reusable cloth nappies and save £100s

PARENTS and parents-to-be are being offered a £54 voucher by the Council to help cover the costs of buying real cotton nappies or towards a nappy laundry service.

Babies use close to 2,000 plastic disposable nappies every year until potty trained – and with more than 4,000 babies born every year in the borough, plastic nappies account for six per cent of waste in Hackney.

By using reusable real nappies residents could save between £500 and £1,000 per baby and cut their waste contribution significantly. In fact, by replacing just one disposable with a real nappy every day, people could save a 730 plastic nappies per baby from going to landfill.

Sarah Williams, Recycling Manager at Hackney Council, has been using real nappies with her baby girl (pictured).

She says: “I have spent so little money on buying nappies. There's heaps of used nappies going free or cheap and they are as good as new.

“We love using real nappies – why create mountains of waste when there is a kinder, better alternative, which is virtually waste free.”

Residents interested in finding out more about using real nappies and claiming their £54 voucher, can attend one of Hackney Real Nappy Network's monthly nappy demonstrations or nappy give and take days.

YOU cannot judge a person till you have walked in their shoes. So what better medium through which to explore history than the footwear in which its inhabitants trod?

Called Footnotes, Sutton House's latest exhibition is billed as an artistic response to nearby London College of Fashion's extensive shoe archive.

For the show, artists Eelko Moorer, Ellen Sampson, Linda Brothwell and Laila Diallo have produced new works inspired by the quirky collection including 1930s orthopaedic footwear, silk slippers from the 1800s and even a shoe made for a sheep.

The exhibition is an interactive experience, with virtual reality elements and an audio installation that plays the sound of dancing shoes.

Indeed, the selected footwear form a trail through the National Trust property, Hackney's oldest home, which was once Eliza Temple's School of Etiquette for Girls (a small Victorian girl's shoe, found under the floorboards and dating from this period is included in the exhibition).

So you can, quite literally, follow in the footsteps of time.

LUNA VOYAGE

Until 5 May, Tues-Sat,
10am-6pm

British printmaker and painter Tom Hammick conjures a metaphorical journey to outer space, weaving interstellar dreams and earthly relationships. A suite of 17 images traces the cyclical path of his protagonist, an artist or poet, who leaves life on earth in pursuit of freedom and isolation on the moon – only to be haunted by memories of those he has left behind. As the journey continues, Hammick's explorer is plagued by dreamlike visions of events on Earth, prompting questions about whether he ever really left home at all. Free. All ages. THE SISTERS OF INDISCRETION

Until 6 May, various opening times

London artists Julie Ann and Julia Maddison will use a wall of the gallery as a giant scrapbook, displaying images and objects; specially made, collected or found. The installation will revolve around the dialogue between the two artists, who have much in common – but also find themselves at odds with each other in their artistic practices. This dialogue is also part of a much wider discussion about women; what has changed in the past 100 years since we were given the vote? Free. All ages. STRANGER DANGER

Until 6 May, Mon-Sat
11am-7pm, Sun 12noon-6pm

The exhibition features new bodies of works from Swedish artist Joakim Allgulander and Dublin-based artist John Slade. Allgulander's works explore monochromatic surfaces depicting close-up scenes from nature using myriad materials such as spray paint and metallic liquids. While Slade will be displaying multimedia works on paper and canvas in materials including oil paint, charcoal, inks and pastels. Free. All ages. Jealous East, 53 Curtain Road, Shoreditch, EC2A 3PT. Info:

DEVOTION - A PORTRAIT OF LORETTA

Until 7 Jul, various opening times

Photographer Franklyn Rodgers pays homage to a figure sacred in his life: his mother, Loretta. Over several years, Rodgers photographed Loretta and the circle of friends important to her. The large-scale portraits in Devotion recognise the significance of these close-knit relationships: mother and son, and between friends. Rodgers' photographs investigate what it means to look into the human face. He drew inspiration from work of French philosopher Emmanuel Levinas, who claimed that our individual obligations and morality are found in the recognition of the suffering and mortality of others. Free. All ages. Fluffer Pit Parties: Pulled Apart By Horses

4 May, Hackney Arts Centre, 13 Stoke Newington Rd, N16 8BH

IF you like your concerts to be a sedate affair, look away now. The first party at the new Hackney Arts Centre looks to be loud and wild.

The venue is building a bespoke, 360-degree stage for the huge Fluffer Pit Party, scheduled for 4 May.

It may sound cute and cuddly but these nights, run by Fluffer Records, are designed to be the antithesis to the anodyne, big stadium gig and have a cult following among those who like to get up close, personal and a little sweaty with their guitar bands.

The 4 May event promises some of the best in new rock music, with thrash band Pulled Apart By Horses (pictured) supported by Husky Loops, Baba Naga, Girls In Synthesis, Madonnatron, Squid and Ditz. Let the moshing commence.

Doors open at 6.30pm. Tickets cost £19.80. After party at Rocksteady Basement, Dalston, from midnight – 4am. For more information, and to book, visit:

A space to make amends

Artist Alexandra McKenzie with murals that have been painted with the help of young people on the project

A NEBULA in space and an underwater scene are just some of the murals painted by young people working with local artist Alexandra McKenzie as part of a new project.

The artwork, painted in a youth offending centre over the course of a year, was created by young people on reparation orders, which are non-custodial sentences to help prevent further offending and help generate an understanding of the effects of crime.

Alexandra, who lives in Clapton and is a Young Hackney volunteer, said: "Rather than repetitive tasks that people usually think of in reparation schemes, the mural painting has lots of aspects to it. As well as something nice to do, there is a sense of completion and pride at the end, that their work will be enjoyed by other young people."

There are eight murals: a sandy beach, coral reef, kelp forest, nebula in space, birds in the sky, fossils, the savannah and a wildflower meadow, which were created using lino-cut prints and specialist paint.

So far, nine young people have worked on the project.

One 17-year-old girl, who was on a 10-month reparation order, said: "I thought I was going to be doing some really mundane job but this has been interesting, and it's good to do something that will last and be seen by

"This has been interesting and it's good to do something that will last and be seen by lots of people"

lots of people."

Youth Support and Development Worker, Norman Sagers, who has been working with those involved in the project, said: "Alexandra's creative approach helps set an environment where young people can concentrate on the work, forget the other issues going on in their lives and reflect on the satisfaction from making a more positive contribution.

"They get to see that they can do so much more than they thought they could."

Anne Canning, Group Director for Children, Adults and Community Health, added: "We believe the best way of tackling youth crime is through prevention. The art reparation project is just one of many programmes, which run to not only serve the community but allow for personal and skills development, to ensure young people transition into an independent and successful adulthood."

News in brief

Get ready for free fun activities at Dalston Children's Festival

THE biggest ever Dalston Children's Festival is set to leave families spoilt for choice this summer, with more than 30 free activities on offer.

Taking place on two Saturdays, 26 May and 2 June, during the half-term holiday, the Dalston Children's Festival will have plenty of activities on offer both indoors and out.

Highlights of the festival include:

- A drag queen storyteller at the Hackney Pride 365 family picnic
- A film screening of Disney's 'Coco' in Spanish with English subtitles, followed by Day of the Dead-inspired craft making
- A visit from the Hackney Playbus, as Dalston Square is transformed into a giant playground
- Bollywood dancing for kids and parents
- Carnival crafts with last year's Hackney Carnival winners Tropical Isles.

The Council's Chief Executive, Tim Shields, said: "It's really great to see the borough's community groups, businesses and artists working together to provide these fantastic free events for Hackney's families and children, right in the heart of Dalston."

The Dalston Children's Festival is a community-led event and has been organised by the Dalston Children's Network, a collective of organisations that have offers for children and young people in Dalston, and is supported by the Council. For more info, visit: www.dalstonchildren.org.uk; pick up a flyer from Dalston businesses and the Dalston CLR James Library; or follow on Twitter using #dalstonchildren or on the festival's Facebook page.

DiAndre eBanks-Silvera at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, Steppaz in Walthamstow, Chifa K at Wood Green

Did they kick it on the tour? Yes they did!

SIX performances, across six different boroughs, in a single day, featuring some of London's best musical talent and a live orchestra: that was the challenge undertaken by Hackney-based arts group #Artskickers on 21 April.

The whirlwind tour, named the #Artskickers Urban Symphony, brought together 20 young artists from East London, including Hackney's spoken word performers DiAndre eBanks-Silvera, 17, (Anonymous Poetree) and Chifa Khelfaoui, 19, (Chifa K), to work with musical director Renell Shaw and conductor Gijs Kramers.

The artists, accompanied by Street Orchestra Live and led by comedian Kat B, performed at Dalston Square and Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, and four other East London venues.

Speaking to the audience, Angie Gough, #Artskickers founder and arts activist, said: "Our young creatives have given us an incredible day – uplifting and being uplifted. We're delighted so many people came out to hear their voices and celebrate their talent. It's vital for young people to have outlets for creative expression that allow them to gain confidence."

Nominations are now open for the #Artskickers Awards. To find out more, visit: www.artskickersawards.com

WERE you a May Queen? Can you help Hackney Archives trace people who had their photos taken at the May Queen Festivals in the 1950s and 1960s?

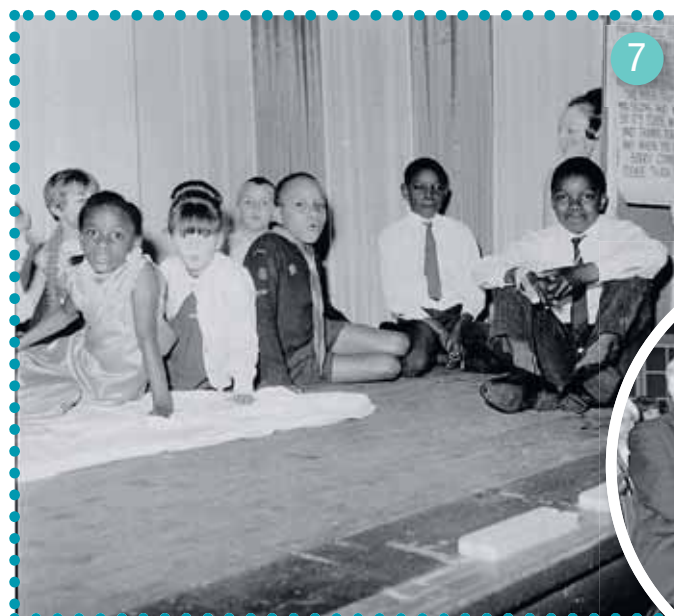

These photographs, taken by Gibson's studio in Clapton, not only capture the May Queens in their splendid dresses but performers and audiences too.

Staff at Hackney Archives in Dalston would love to hear from anyone in these photos, or who took part in the festivals at Hackney Central Hall (now Hackney Picturehouse on Mare Street), in the 1950s and 1960s.

The Archives is undertaking a two-year project to digitise 150,000 negatives taken by Gibson's studio between 1952 and 1978. You can see more photos taken by Gibson online at Flickr (search 'Hackney Archives') and on Hackney Archives' Facebook page. An exhibition of Gibson's photos will be opening at Hackney Museum in May.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse
www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent’s Canal in Shoreditch. Linguine with white wine sauce and mussels is easy to cook and packed with flavour – a quick and tasty treat!

Linguine with white wine sauce and mussels

Serves 5

Preparation time 15 mins
Cooking time 15 mins

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 5 shallots, finely sliced
- 25g wholegrain mustard
- 50ml white cooking wine
- 50ml double cream
- 100ml vegetable/fish stock
- 100g chopped thyme
- 375g linguine
- 1kg mussels (200g per portion).

mins. Add the stock and cook for 2 mins. Add the cream and cook for a further 2 mins. Add the thyme and leave to cool

- Cook the linguine for 8 mins until al dente
- Put the white wine sauce, cooked pasta and mussels in a pan, add 1 cup of water and cover. Heat gently until all the mussels open. Serve and enjoy.

Method

- Clean the mussels by scrubbing them in cold water, tugging out any 'beards'. Throw away any mussels that float to the top of the water or are open
- Heat the oil in a hot saucepan and add the shallots until translucent. Add the mustard and cook for 5 mins
- Add the cooking wine and cook for 2-5

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes across the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open Mon to Fri 9am - 3pm. Evenings and weekends available for large bookings and private events. For more info, visit: www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk For bookings e-mail: eat@waterhouserestaurant.co.uk or call: 020 7033 0123.
